This is my house. Every spring I go out and plant a beautiful garden.

On one side I plant vegetables, in the corner I plant herbs, and the rest is for daisies. Daisies are my favorite flower.

One day in summer when my vegetable patch was full I took my basket out and picked my lunch. I pulled carrots, picked beans and some lettuce. On my way back I picked a big bunch of daisies.

I set them on the porch and went inside to get a vase for the daisies.

When I came back, the daisies were gone!

What do you think of that?

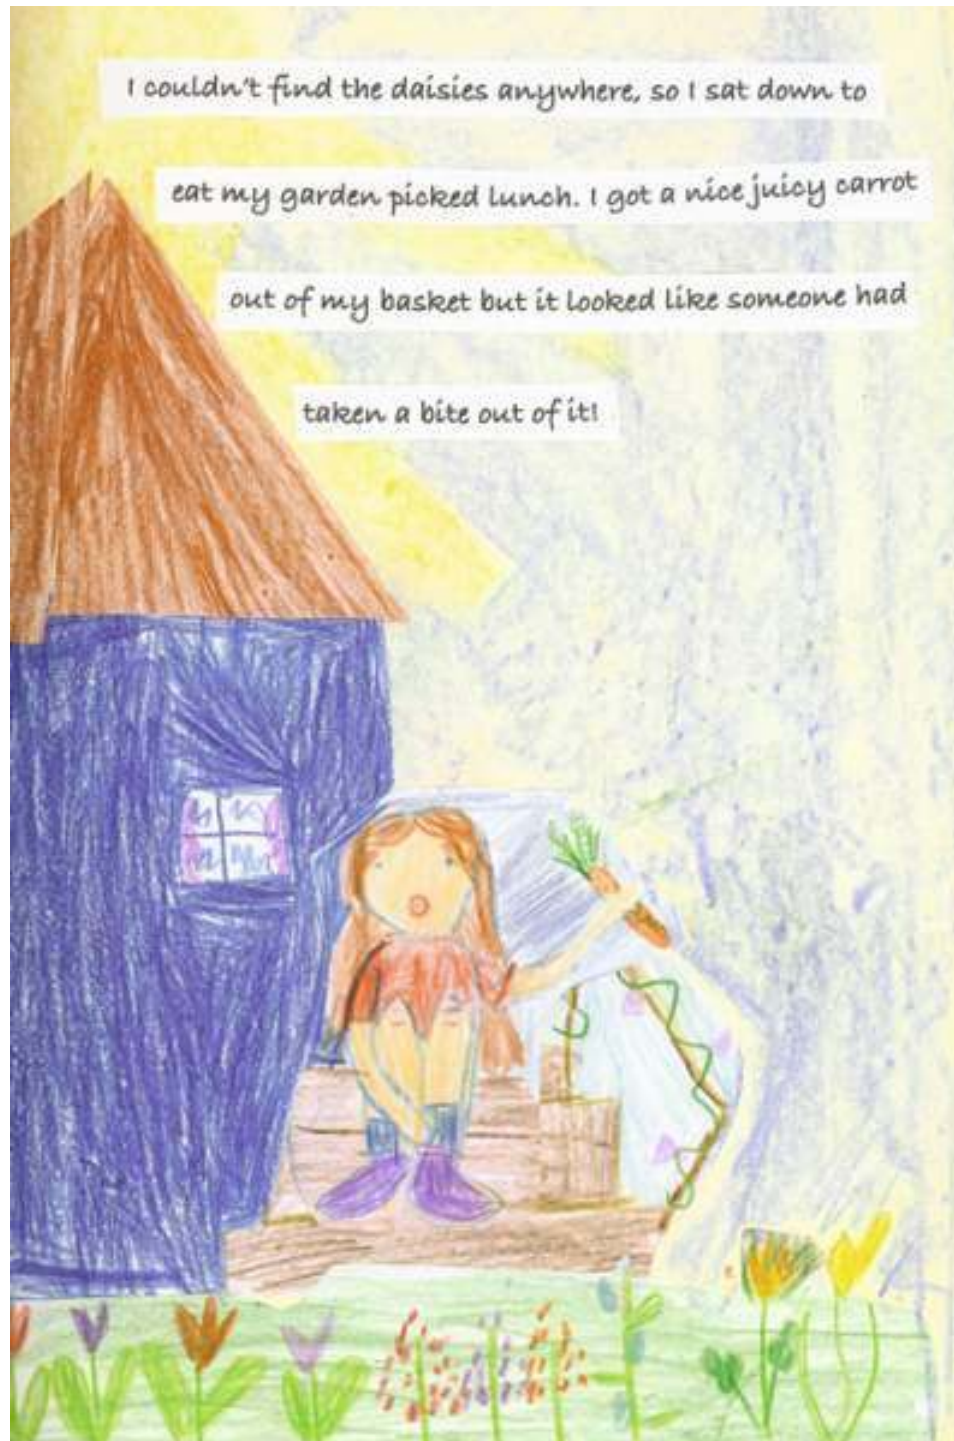

I couldn't find the daisies anywhere, so I sat down to eat my garden picked lunch. I got a nice juicy carrot out of my basket but it looked like someone had taken a bite out of it!

It was then that I realized. Someone had been stealing from my garden! When I found out who it was I was going to be really mad!

So the next day I picked some more daisies, laid them on the step, and hid to see if who it was would come back.

I waited and waited. Just as I about to give up I saw coming up my steps, some ears, followed by a pink twitchy nose, a pair of bright brown eyes and.....oh my goodness..

it was a rabbit!

Slowly, so as not to frighten it, I picked up a daisy and held it out. The rabbit sniffed it, and then began to nibble away at the head. I reached out my other hand, and touched her glossy fur.
I wasn't mad any more.

I decided to name the bunny Daisy, because of her love for daisies. From then on we were best friends, and I let the bunny eat all she wanted from OUR garden!
