

We're All Different

And

We're All The Same!

By

Noelani delRosario-Sabet

This Book is dedicated to

All World Citizens!

Dylan in America says, "Hello!" while Lilly in France says, "Bon jour!"
They may greet each other differently but it brings a smile for sure!

Zhonghui in China eats with chopsticks while Preeya in India eats with her hands.
Many people eat in different ways in many different lands.
But the food goes down the same, through the mouth down to their belly.
They eat when their tummy growls and signals that they're hungry.

Ethan in England loves to eat Fish N Chips while Marwa in Egypt eats her eggplant dip!
They'll both stop eating when their tummy is full because if they don't they'll get fat like a bull!

Noelani in Hawaii wears a green grass skirt while Nathan in Scotland wears a green plaid kilt. It doesn't matter what you wear on the outside as long as you are good and kind on the inside!

Farzad in Iran falls from a pomegranate tree,
While Marikit in the Philippines slips in the rice terrace and scrapes her knees.
When they get hurt they both say "Oweee!"
and when they bleed their blood is as red as can be!

Adib, a Palestinian boy is sick in bed while Hannah in Israel is covered in a rash of red!
Their mothers are beside them filled with worry,
Praying to God that their children will get better in a hurry!

We're all different and we're all the same.
We all feel joy and we all feel pain.
We should respect our differences and one another.
We're really one family, sisters and brothers.

The End!!!